

RAC

- RA'CER. n. f. [from race.] Runner; one that contends in speed.
His stumbling founder'd jade can trot as high
As any other pegasus can fly;
So the dull eel moves nimbler in the mud,
Than all the swift-finn'd racers of the flood. Dorset.
A poet's form the plac'd before their eyes,
And bade the nimblest racer seize the prize. Pope.
- RA'CINESS. n. f. [from racy.] The quality of being racy.
- RACK. n. f. [racke, Dutch, from racken, to stretch.]
1. An engine to torture.
Vex not his ghost; O let him pass! he hates him
That would, upon the rack of this rough world, Stretch him out longer. Shakefp. King Lear.
Did ever any man upon the rack afflict himself, because he had received a cross answer from his mistress. Taylor.
Let them feel the whip, the sword, the fire,
And in the tortures of the rack expire. Addison.
2. Torture; extreme pain.
A fit of the stone puts a king to the rack, and makes him as miserable as it does the meanest subject. Temple.
A cool behaviour sets him on the rack, and is interpreted as an instance of aversion or indifference. Addison.
3. Any instrument by which extension is performed.
These bows, being somewhat like the long bows in use amongst us, were bent only by a man's immediate strength, without the help of any bander or rack that are used to others. Wilkins's Mathematical Magick.
4. A distaff; commonly a portable distaff, from which they spin by twirling a ball.
The sisters turn the wheel,
Empty the woolly rack, and fill the reel. Dryden.
5. [Racke, Dutch, a track.] The clouds as they are driven by the wind.
That, which is now a horse, even with a thought
The rack dissolves, and makes it indistinct
As water is in water. Shakefp. Antony and Cleopatra.
The great globe itself,
Yea, all, which it inherits, shall dissolve;
And, like this insubstantial pageant, faded,
Leave not a rack behind. Shakefp. Tempest.
We often see against some form,
A silence in the heav'n's, the rack stand still,
The bold winds speechless, and the orb below
As hush as death. Shakefp. Hamlet.
The winds in the upper region, which move the clouds above, which we call the rack, and are not perceived below, pass without noise. Bacon's Natural History.
As wintry winds contending in the sky,
With equal force of lungs their titles try;
They rage, they roar: the doubtful rack of heav'n Stands without motion, and the tide undriv'n. Dryden.
6. [Racca, the occiput, Saxon; racca, Ilandick, hinges or joints.] A neck of mutton cut for the table.
7. A grate.
8. A wooden grate in which hay is placed for cattle.
Their bulls they send to pastures far,
Or hills, or feed them at full racks within. May's Virgil.
The best way to feed cattle with it, is to put it in racks, because of the great quantity they tread down. Mortimer.
He bid the nimble hours
Bring forth the steeds; the nimble hours obey:
From their full racks the generous steeds retire. Addison.
9. Arrack; a spirituous liquor. See ARRACK.
To RACK. v. n. [from the noun.] To stream as clouds before the wind.
Three glorious suns, each one a perfect sun,
Not separated with the racking clouds,
But sever'd in a pale clear-shining sky. Shakefp.
To RACK. v. a. [from the noun.]
1. To torment by the rack.
Hold, O dreadful Sir,
You will not rack an innocent old man. Dryden and Lee.
2. To torment; to harass.
Th' apostate angel, though in pain,
Vaunting aloud, but rack'd with deep despair. Milton.
3. To harass by exaction.
The landlords there shamefully rack their tenants, exacting of them, besides his covenants, what he pleaseth. Spenser.
The commons ha't thou rack'd; the clergy's bags
Are lank and lean with thy extortions. Shakefp.
He took possession of his just estate,
Nor rack'd his tenants with increase of rent. Dryden.
4. They racking and stretching scripture further than by God was meant, are drawn into sundry inconveniences. Hooker.
The wisest among the heathens rack'd their wits, and cast about every way, managing every little argument to the utmost advantage. Tillotson's Sermons.
5. To stretch; to extend.
Nor have I money nor commodity
To raise a present sum;
Try what my credit can in Venice do,
That shall be rack'd even to the uttermost. Shakefp.

RAD

6. To defecate; to draw off from the lees. I know not whence this word is derived in this sense; rein, German, is clear, pure, whence our word to rinse; this is perhaps of the same race.
It is common to draw wine or beer from the lees, which we call racking, whereby it will clarify much the sooner. Bacon.
Some roll their cask about the cellar to mix it with the lees, and, after a few days resettlement, rack it off. Mortimer.
RACK-RENT. n. f. [rack and rent.] Rent raised to the utter-most.
Have poor families been ruined by rack-rents, paid for the lands of the church? Swift's Miscellanies.
RACK-RENT. n. f. [rack and rent.] One who pays the utmost rent.
Though this be a quarter of his yearly income, and the publick tax takes away one hundred; yet this influences not the yearly rent of the land, which the rack-renter or under-tenant pays. Locke.
RACKET. n. f. [of uncertain derivation; M. Casaubon derives it, after his custom, from gaxia, the dash of fluctuation against the shore.]
1. An irregular clattering noise.
That the tennis court keeper knows better than I, it is a low ebb of linen with thee, when thou keep'st not racket there. Shakefp. Henry IV. p. ii.
2. A confused talk, in burlesque language.
Ambition hath removed her lodging, and lives the next door to faction, where they keep such a racket, that the whole parish is disturbed and every night in an uproar. Swift.
3. [Raquette, Fr.] The instrument with which players strike the ball. Whence perhaps all the other senses.
When we have match'd our rackets to these balls,
We will in France play a set,
Shall strike his father's crown into the hazard. Shakefp.
The body, into which impression is made, either can yield backward or it cannot: if it can yield backward, then the impression made is a motion; as we see a stroke with a racket upon a ball, makes it fly from it. Digby on the Soul.
He talks much of the motives to do and forbear, how they determine a reasonable man, as if he were no more than a tennis-ball, to be tossed to and fro by the rackets of the second causes. Bramhall against Hobbs.
- RA'CKING. n. f.
Racking pace of a horse is the same as an amble, only that it is a swifter time and a shorter tread; and though it does not rid so much ground, yet it is something easier. Far. Dict.
- RA'CKOON. n. f.
The raccoon is a New England animal, like a badger, having a tail like a fox, being clothed with a thick and deep fur: it sleeps in the day time in a hollow tree, and goes out at nights, when the moon shines, to feed on the sea fide, where it is hunted by dogs. Bailey.
- RA'CY. adj. [perhaps from rayz, Spanish, a root.] Strong;
flavorous; tasting of the soil.
Rich racy verses in which we
The soil, from which they come, taste, smell, and see. Cowley.
From his brain that Helicon distill,
Whose racy liquor did his offspring fill. Denham.
The cyder at first is very luscious, but if ground more early, it is more racy. Mortimer's Husbandry.
The hospitable sage, in sign
Of social welcome, mix'd the racy wine,
Late from the mellowing cask restor'd to light,
By ten long years refin'd, and rosy bright. Pope.
RAD. the old pret. of read. Spenser.
- RAD. rad, red and rad, differing only in dialect, signify counsel; as Conrad, powerful or skilful in counsel; Ethelred, a noble counsellor; Rodbert, eminent for counsel; Eubulus and Thrasylbulus have almost the same sense. Gibson.
- RA'DDOCK, or ruddock. n. f. A bird.
The raddock would,
With charitable bill, bring thee all this. Shakefp.
- RA'DIANCE. n. f. [radiare, Lat.] Sparkling lustre; glitter.
- RA'DIANCY. n. f. [radiare, Lat.]
By the sacred radiance of the sun,
By all the operations of the orbs,
Here I disclaim all my paternal care. Shakefp. K. Lear.
Whether there be not too high an apprehension above its natural radiance, is not without just doubt; however it be granted a very splendid gum, and whose sparkles may somewhat resemble the glances of fire. Brown's Vulgar Errors.
The son
Girt with omnipotence, with radiance crown'd
Of majesty divine. Milton.
A glory surpassing the sun in its greatest radiance, which, though we cannot describe, will bear some resemblance.
The rapid radiance instantaneous strikes
Th' illumin'd mountain. Thomson's Spring.
RADIANCY. n. f.

RAD

- RA'DIANT. adj. [radians, Lat.] Shining; brightly sparkling; emitting rays.
There was a fun of gold radiant upon the top, and before,
a small cherub of gold with wings displayed. Bacon.
Mark what radiant state she spreads,
In circle round her shining throne,
Shooting her beams like silver threads,
This, this is the alone. Milton's Arcades.
Virtue could see to do what virtue would
By her own radiant light, though fun and moon
Were in the flat sea funk. Milton.
I see the warlike host of heaven,
Radiant in glittering arms and beamy pride, Go forth to succour truth below. Milton.
- To RA'DIATE. v. n. [radiatus, Lat.] To emit rays; to shine;
to sparkle.
Though with wit and parts their possessors could never engage God to send forth his light and his truth; yet now that revelation hath disclosed them, and that he hath been pleased to make them radiate in his word, men may recollect those scatter'd divine beams, and kindling with them the topics proper to warm our affections, enflame holy zeal. Boyle.
Light radiates from luminous bodies directly to our eyes, and thus we see the sun or a flame; or it is reflected from other bodies, and thus we see a man or a picture. Locke.
- RA'DIATED. adj. [radiatus, Lat.] Adorned with rays.
The radiated head of the phoenix gives us the meaning of a passage in Aulonius. Addison.
- RADIATION. n. f. [radiatio, Lat. radiation, Fr.]
1. Beamy lustre; emission of rays.
We have perspective houses, where we make demonstrations of all lights and radiations, and of all colours. Bacon.
Should I say I liv'd darker than were true,
Your radiation can all clouds subdue,
But one; 'tis best light to contemplate you. Donne.
2. Emission from a center every way.
Sound paralleth in many things with the light, and radiation of things visible. Bacon's Natural History.
- RA'DICAL. adj. [radical, Fr. from radix, Latin.]
1. Primitive; original.
The differences, which are secondary and proceed from these radical differences, are, plants are all figurate and de-terminate, which inanimate bodies are not. Bacon.
Such a radical truth, that God is, springing up together with the essence of the soul, and previous to all other thoughts, is not pretended to by religion. Bentley.
2. Implanted by nature.
The emission of the loose and adventitious moisture doth betray the radical moisture, and carrieth it for company. Bac.
If the radical moisture of gold were separated, it might be contrived to burn without being consumed. Wilkins.
The fun beams render the humours hot, and dry up the radical moisture. Arbutnot.
3. Serving to origination.
RADICALITY. n. f. [from radical.] Origination.
There may be equivocal seeds and hermaphroditical principles, that contain the radicality and power of different forms; thus, in the seeds of wheat, there lieth obscurely the feminality of dandel. Brown's Vulgar Errors.
- RA'DICALLY. adv. [from radical.] Originally; primitively.
It is no easy matter to determine the point of death in insects, who have not their vitalities radically confined unto one part. Brown's Vulgar Errors.
These great orbs thus radically bright,
Primitive founts, and origins of light
Enliven worlds deny'd to human sight. Prior.
- RA'DICALNESS. n. f. [from radical.] The state of being radical.
To RA'DICATE. v. a. [radicatus, from radix, Lat.] To root; to plant deeply and firmly.
Meditation will radicate these seeds, fix the transient gleam of light and warmth, confirm resolutions of good, and give them a durable confidence in the soul. Hammond.
Nor have we let fall our pen upon discouragement of unbelief, from radicated beliefs, and points of high prescription. Brown's Vulgar Errors.
If the object stays not on the sense, it makes not impression enough to be remembered; but if it be repeated there, it leaves plenty enough of those images behind it, to strengthen the knowledge of the object: in which radicated knowledge, if the memory consist, there would be no need of refreshing those atoms in the brain. Glanvill's Defence.
- RADICATION. n. f. [radication, Fr. from radicate.] The act of fixing deep.
They that were to plant a church, were to deal with men of various inclinations, and of different habits of sin, and degrees of radication of those habits; and to each of these some proper application was to be made to cure their souls.
Hammond's Fundamentals.
- RA'DICLE. n. f. [radicle, Fr. from radix, Lat.] Radicle is that part of the seed of a plant, which, upon its vegetation, becomes its root. Quincy.

RAG

- RA'DISH. n. f. [rædic, Sax. radis, raifort, Fr. raphanus, Lat.]
A root.
The flower of the radish consists of four leaves, which are placed in the form of a cross; out of the flower-cup rises the pointal, which afterward turns to a pod in form of an horn, that is thick, spongy, and furnished with a double row of roundish seeds, which are separated by a thin membrane:
there are five species; of that which is commonly cultivated in the kitchen-gardens for its root, there are several varieties; as the small topped, the deep-red, and the long topped stripped radish. Müller.
- RA'DIUS. n. f. [Latin.]
1. The semi-diameter of a circle.
2. A bone of the fore-arm, which accompanies the ulna from the elbow to the wrist.
To RAFF. v. a. To sweep; to huddle; to take hastily without distinction.
Their causes and effects I thus raff up together. Carew.
To RA'FFLE. v. n. [raffler, to snatch, Fr.] To cast dice for a prize, for which every one lays down a stake.
Letters from Hampstead give me an account, there is a late institution there, under the name of a raffing shop. Tatler.
- RA'FFLE. n. f. [raffle, Fr. from the verb.] A species of game or lottery, in which many stake a small part of the value of some single thing, in consideration of a chance to gain it.
The toy, brought to Rome in the third triumph of Pompey, being a pair of tables for gaming, made of two precious stones, three foot broad, and four foot long, would have made a fine raffle. Arbutnot on Coins.
- RAFT. n. f. [probably from ratia, Latin.] A frame or float made by laying pieces of timber cross each other.
Where is that fon
That floated with thee on the fatal raft. Shakefp.
Fell the timber of yon lofty grove,
And form a raft, and build the rising ship. Pope.
- RAFT. part. pass. of raff or raff. Spenser. Torn; rent.
- RAFTER. n. f. [ræfter, Sax. rafter, Dutch; corrupted, says Junius, from roof tree.] The secondary timbers of the house; the timbers which are let into the great beam.
The rafters of my body, bone,
Being fill with you, the muscle, finew and vein;
Which tile this house, will come again. Donne.
Shepherd,
I trust thy honest offer'd courtesy,
Which oft is sooner found in lowly sheds
With smoky rafters, than in tap'stry halls. Milton.
On them the Trojans cast Stones, rafters, pillars, beams. Denham.
From the East, a Belgian wind
His hostile breath through the dry rafters sent;
The flames impell'd. Dryden.
The roof began to mount aloft,
Aloft rose every beam and rafter,
The heavy wall climb'd slowly after. Swift's Miscel.
- RA'FTERED. adj. [from rafter.] Built with rafters.
No raft'ered roofs with dance and tabor sound,
No noon-tide bell invites the country round. Pope.
- RAG. n. f. [Ryaccobe, torn, Saxon; gax, Fr.]
1. A piece of cloth torn from the rest; a tatter.
Cows, hoods and habits, with their wearers tost,
And flutter'd into rags. Milton.
Rags are a great improvement of chalky lands. Mortimer.
2. Any thing rent and tattered; worn out cloaths.
Fathers that wear rags,
Do make their children blind;
But fathers that bear bags,
Shall see their children kind. Shakefp. King Lear.
Worn like a cloth;
Gnawn into rags by the devouring moth.
Content with poverty, my foul I arm;
And virtue, though in rags, will keep me warm. Dryden.
3. A fragment of dress.
He had first matter seen undrest;
He took her naked all alone,
Before one rag of form was on. Hudibras, p. i.
- RAGAMUFFIN. n. f. [from rag and I know not what else.]
I have led my ragamuffins where they were pepper'd; there's not three of my hundred and fifty left alive; and they are for the town's end to beg during life. Shakefp. Henry IV.
Shall we brook that paltry ass
And feeble scoundrel, Hudibras,
With that more paltry ragamuffin, Ralpho, vapouring and huffing. Hudibras, p. i.
Attended with a crew of ragamuffins, he broke into his house, turned all things topsy-turvy, and then set it on fire. Swift.
- RAGE. n. f. [rage, Fr.]
1. Violent anger; vehement fury.
This tiger-footed rage, when it shall find
The harm of unkind'd swiftness, will, too late,
Tie leaden pounds to's heels. Shakefp. Coriolanus.
